Abstract : At the edge of 20th century, the society entered into a period popularly called as "Information Age" All the human activities. are directed towards information-producing and information consuming practices. With the march time, information has become the central focus of human living. As quoted by Alvin Toffler, "Information is Power". Today, Information is playing a vital role in every sector of the society at the global level. Without proper information, no body lives in the present Information Society as delivered by the Daniel Bell, USA. So, Information is regarded as the oxygen of democracy. Inforamtion may be called as human blood. It invigorates where it percolates. If people do not know what is happening in their society, if the actions of those who rule them are hidden, then they cannot take a meaningful part in the affairs of the society. Freedom of expression, freedom of dissemination of ideas and access to information is vital to the functioning of a democcratic government. Information is crucial for a vibrant democracy and good governance process, but also promotes openness, transparency and accountability in administration. This article discuss about the Right To Information (RTIA) Act-2005 and its features and also Indian constitutional provisions to know every citizen of India.
